Using the Mails to Defraud.

Agents Adams and Dotzler of the Department of Justice were taking their after breakfast stroll in Madison avenue yesterday when they saw a man who to their trained detective eyes looked as though he was the sort of person that ought to wear a fuzzy overcoat and have a high bred terrier trot-ting at his heels. It was the absence $11,000 GOLD VANISHES ting at his heels. It was the absence of any such overcoat or terrier that made the Government men certain and they went right up to the man.

"Why, you're Walter M. Alexander, who didn't keep a dog kennel at Columbus, Ohio," they said, "and we've wanted you for several years. Is it not so?" And Walter M. Alexander said it was so and made no fuss at all when he was taken to the Federal Building be-United States Commissioner Shields, who read to him a long document, charging him with using the mails to sell dogs when he had no dogs to sell. Mr. Alexander listened intently and then said he would go back willingly to Columbus to face his dogless accusers. He was sent to board at the Tombs until it was time to start.

R. H. Macy & Co.'s Attractions Are Their Low Prices.

There is no golden road to Low Prices. There is no secret in Macy's selling system. Any other store that (1) Sells for Cash Only, that (2) Manufactures a Large Proportion of the Merchandise it Sells, and that (3) is Satisfied with Small Profits, can match Macy's prices.

But until some other store adopts the Macy merchandising system, the wise shopper who wants reliable goods at lowest prices will buy at Macy's.

It is so easy for Macy's to sell at lowest prices so long as other stores in the race are pulling along Credit Systems, Installment Plans, Trading Stamps, and other heavy expenses.

The regular Macy saving amounts to only 10% in merchandise that Macy's have difficulty in obtaining, such as Books. It averages 25% in Men's, Women's and Children's Clothing and other merchandise that Macy's have equal facilities with other large stores for obtaining; but it runs up to 40% in High-grade Imported Merchandise where Macy's facilities are very unusual, and where in addition, their only competitors are the high-priced specialty stores. For instance fine Furs, fine China, fine Glassware, Paintings and Rugs, where it is not unusual to save half by buying at Macy's.

Do all your shopping at Macy's and take the most important step toward getting back to the old-time cost-ofliving.
